

COLLECTOR GENERAL OF CUSTOMS

INTRODUCTION

The records of the Collector General of Customs span the years 1841-1941 and include documents created by the Treasury Board, the Ministry of Finance, the Superintendent of Public Works and The Board of Harbor Commissioners. These records reflect the various functions, which were: the collection of customs duties; the regulation of entry and departure of passengers and cargo; the moorage of vessels; and the administration of the harbor.

Although official records of the Collector General of Customs begin in 1841, earlier documents indicate that the functions of the Harbor Master were carried out by Alexander Adams and Stephen Reynolds prior to that time. Related 20th century records may be found in the Board of Harbor Commissioners. Printed reports are filed in the Government Publication Collections. Broadsides and Tables of Customs House statistics are available for 1843-1873.

AGENCY HISTORY

The earliest records of shipping and harbor affairs date from 1841 and were kept by the Officer of Customs, entitled the Harbor Master, and placed under the Treasury Board in the Ministry of the Interior. It was the duty of the Harbor Master to grant permission to vessels to land their cargo, which was originally allowed free. In January of 1843, a 5% duty on imported goods was imposed, (raised to 10% in 1860 and to 25% in 1876), which made it necessary to establish a Customs House and to hire a Collector. The offices of Harbor Master and Collector were combined and William Paty was appointed to the position.

On Oct. 29, 1845, in an act to organize the Executive Departments, the Treasury Board was dissolved and its functions were taken over by the newly created Ministry of Finance. This resulted in three changes:

1. The office of Collector General was established and, in addition to collecting the import tax, the Collector General of Customs had several other duties. He became, ex-officio, the Postmaster; Superintendent of the execution of all by-laws for coasting vessels; Advisor to the governor for the appointment of a harbormaster, a health officer and a pilot, as well as a collector for ports other than Honolulu; Collector and appraiser of all goods and merchandise entering the port; and Collector of all pilots fees and postal monies. William Paty received the first appointment to this position.
2. The position of Harbormaster was separated from and made responsible to the Collector General. The Harbormaster's duties included keeping seamen's records, issuing bonds and permits to ship, collecting harbor fees and directing vessels to moorage.
3. Four official ports of entry and departure were created, at Honolulu, Lahaina, Hilo, and Hanalei. The Ports of Honolulu and Lahaina were specifically for foreign vessels engaging in trade, while Hilo and Hanalei were designated for use by whaling vessels. This act was amended several times to include additional harbors as official ports of entry and departure:

In 1850 - Kealahou and Kawaihae, Hawaii
Waimea, Kauai

In 1859 - Koloa, Kauai

In 1878 - Kahului, Maui

In 1882 - Mahukona, Hawaii

With the establishment of the Territory and the passage of the Organic Act in 1900, the Ministry of Finance was abolished along with the office of Collector General of Customs. The previous functions of the Collector General passed to the Superintendent of Public Works and subsequently, on July 1, 1911 by Act 163, to the Board of Harbor Commissioners.
