

THE CITIZENS GUARD, 1893-1902

INTRODUCTION

The records were created by the Citizens Guard which was under the jurisdiction of the Marshal's Office in the Department of the Attorney General. The collection is unrestricted and comprises 97 linear inches.

The Citizens Guard records date from 1893 to 1902 and contain minutes, correspondence, letterbook, company rosters, and personnel records with name indexes. The bulk of the Citizens Guard record group is made up of over 60 volumes of company rosters and personnel records with name indexes. The Minutes and Outgoing Letters document Citizens Guard functions and activities. The Timebooks and List of Members who Received Certificates of Active Service in the Revolution of 1895 document Citizens Guard participation in the 1895 Rebellion.

The bulk of the records date from 1895 to 1898. The role and activities of Marshal A.M. Brown as commander of the Citizens Guard are documented in the Incoming Letters to Staff Officers and Outgoing Letters. Citizens Guard functions and activities such as firearms acquisitions, drills, shooting matches, parades are documented in the minutes and correspondence. The disbandment of the Citizens Guard is also documented in the minutes and correspondence. Citizens Guard participation in the 1895 Rebellion and call to service during a cholera outbreak scare in 1895 are evidenced in the Timebook and Journal of the Nuuanu Valley Guard.

Family history researchers and firearms collectors will find the records of the Citizens Guard quite interesting. The following series contain personnel information of interest to the family history researcher: Minutes and Oahu Squad Rosters, Incoming Letters to Staff Officers, Correspondence of the Third Division, Company Reports, Recordbook of Squad 3 Division 1, Journal of Nuuanu Valley Guard, Timebooks, Citizens Guard Commissions and 1895 Census, List of Members...in the Revolution of 1895, Rosters, Personnel Records, Enlistment Applications and Miscellaneous Records of the Citizens Guard.

Firearms collectors will find serial numbers to rifles issued to Citizens Guard members in Minutes and Oahu Squad Rosters, Incoming Letters to Staff Officers, Company Reports, Recordbook of Squad 3 Division 1, Rosters and Enlistment Applications.

The records do not document the initial establishment and organization of the Citizens Guard nor its association with the Annexation Club. There are gaps in minutes, letters and correspondence for 1893. Minutes to what appears to be the first Citizens Guard meeting held on January 23, 1893 can be found in the Special Collections Unprocessed Manuscripts Number U-96. The minutes document the establishment and initial organization of the company.

ADMINISTRATIVE HISTORY

The Citizens Guard was organized by Frank B. McStocker, chairman of the Annexation Club Executive Committee, Attorney General A.S. Hartwell, C. Stratemeyer and T.B. Murray shortly after the establishment of the Provisional Government in order to strengthen the cause of the Annexation Party. The Citizens Guard initial organization consisted of nine squads totaling 390 men. After the 1895 Rebellion, the organization comprised over 600 volunteers.

The Citizens Guard was commissioned in 1893 by the Marshal's Office under the Department of the Attorney General as Special Police Officers. It was an organized volunteer militia and functioned as an emergency police force assisting the Sheriff's Departments on Oahu, Hawaii, Maui and Kauai in maintaining law and order; preserving peace and public safety; protecting life and property; and defending the government against enemy attacks.

The Marshal was designated the Commander of the Citizens Guard and commissioned the officers who commanded the divisions. Company officers consisted of one captain, two lieutenants, one orderly sergeant, one quartermaster sergeant, four sergeants, and four corporals who were elected by their respective company members. Companies were commanded by Captains who were responsible for transmitting orders; requisitioning and issuing supplies; maintaining an inventory of stores; and compiling a complete company roster which consisted of names, rank, squad designation, telephone number, occupation, and equipment issued. The company captain or other senior officer maintained a daily record of orders, instructions and events at company headquarters.

Membership in the Citizens Guard was restricted to men who took the oath of loyalty to the Provisional Government and later to the Republic. Each applicant was approved by their respective company captain and the Commander of the Citizens Guard. Many members of the Citizens Guard became proficient in marksmanship and qualified to join the National Guard Sharpshooter units and the Mounted Police force.

Drills, target practices and shooting matches were held by Citizens Guard units to maintain marksmanship and discipline. All members were required to maintain rifles issued to them and keep at least 20 rounds of ammunition. Officers were armed with a sidearm pistol and privates with carbines.

The Citizens Guard was called into active service during the January 1895 rebellion to guard government buildings and assist police officers. In September 1895, the Citizens Guard was called out by Board of Health President William O. Smith to monitor the movement of resident aliens in Honolulu.

Following the 1895 rebellion, the Citizens Guard was reorganized into five divisions. The divisions were composed of companies or squads and organized as follows: 1st Division consisted of companies within the Honolulu city limits; 2nd Division comprised the Mounted Reserve and units on the island of Oahu outside of Honolulu; 3rd Division consisted of companies organized on the island of Hawaii; 4th Division consisted of companies organized on the island of Maui; 5th Division comprised units on the island of Kauai. (See table of Citizens Guard divisions and location of units on pages 8 & 9). The Marshal remained the Commander of the Citizens Guard with members commissioned as Special Police Constables.

With the United States annexation of the Republic of Hawaii, the Citizens Guard disbanded as a volunteer militia on July 18, 1898. The organization remained active and functioned as a social club.
