INTRODUCTION

The records of the 1978 Constitutional Convention consist of records from the Offices of the Secretary and President and from the standing committees. The records are unrestricted and total 8.0 linear feet.

AGENCY HISTORY

Act 17, Session Laws of Hawaii, Special Session of 1977, was enacted by the Legislature to provide for a Constitutional Convention. It provided for the election of the delegates, their compensation, submission of the convention's work and other convention preparations. Pursuant to this Act, 102 delegates to the 1978 Constitutional Convention were chosen in a special election held May 20, 1978.

The 1978 Constitutional Convention, the third since annexation, was called to order on July 5, 1978 in the old Federal Building by Delegate Floyd Pulham, who acted as temporary chairman. The Convention officers were: President, William W. Paty, Jr.; Secretary, M. Haunani Ching, and Assistant Secretary, Craig Nakamura. They were elected by the majority of the Convention in closed balloting. Eight vice-presidents, one from each senatorial district, were elected. Each was chosen by a majority of delegates from the respective senatorial district. These eight vice-presidents were: Bruce C. McCall, Allen W. Barr, Paul E. DiBianco, Donald D. H. Ching, Larry S. Uyehara, H. Jean Goodenow, Les. S. Ihara, Jr., and James Shinno.

The secretary was the officer in charge of the administrative, clerical and custodial activities of the convention. He was responsible for keeping the journal of the proceedings of the Convention and under the direction of the President, preparing a calendar for business each day. The Secretary preserved all proposals, committee reports, and other records, books, documents and papers of the Convention. After adjournment these were delivered to the State Archives.

The President was responsible for calling the convention to order each day and preserving order and decorum. He was responsible for appointing all standing committees and decided all questions of order, subject to appeal to the Convention.

Two administrative, twelve subject, and two procedural committees were formed to investigate and hold hearings on delegate proposals. Every provision of the Constitution was addressed by at least one subject committee on referral by the president and by both procedural committees. The two administrative committees were 1) Budget, Accounts, and Printing and 2) Rules and the two procedural committees were 1) Revision, Amendment and Other Provisions and 2) Style. The twelve subject committees were: 1) Bill of Rights, Suffrage and Elections; 2) Environment, Agriculture, Conservation and Land; 3) Education; 4) Ethics; 5) Executive; 6) Hawaiian Affairs; 7) Judiciary; 8) Legislature; 9) Local Government; 10) Public Health and Welfare, Labor and Industry; 11) Submission and Information; and 12) Taxation.

Each Constitutional Convention delegate could introduce proposals to amend the constitution in open session of the Convention. The Convention President referred each delegate proposal to the appropriate standing committee which studied the proposals, received expert testimony and held public hearings.

The committee then voted on each delegate proposal referred to it. Those which passed by majority vote were combined or sequenced as appropriate into committee proposals which were returned to the Convention accompanied by committee reports which summarized committee findings, opinions and intent. These committee reports passed first reading in the Convention by title and were referred to the Committee of the Whole, composed of the entire Convention acting as a large committee, for further debate. Following this debate, and amendment if any, the Committee of the Whole voted on the proposal. If it passed the Committee of the Whole, it was reported out, accompanied by a report based upon the committee debate, which set forth findings, opinions and intent. The Convention then voted on the proposal. Proposals that achieved a majority in favor were deemed to have passed second reading and were referred to the Committee on Style which would review the proposal to ensure correct and consistent grammar, making any necessary amendments before returning it to the Convention for passage on third and final reading by a majority affirmative vote. The final form of the proposal lastly went to the Committee on Submission and Information which by resolution recommended the method and manner of presentation to the electorate.

The 1978 Constitutional Convention adjourned on December 2, 1978 after 64 days of deliberation. 34 amendments were recommended by the delegates.
