

HAWAII STATEHOOD COMMISSION

1947 - 1959

Act 115, S.L.H. 1947, authorized the establishment of the Hawaii Statehood Commission to "actively support and press the movement for statehood." However, the history of Hawaiian statehood attempts dates to the abortive treaty of 1854 which sought the annexation of the Hawaiian Kingdom to the United States as a state. Following annexation, the Territorial Legislature in 1903 passed a joint resolution requesting Congress to pass a statehood enabling act; in 1920 the first Hawaiian statehood bill was introduced in Congress; in 1935 the Hawaii Equal Rights Commission was established and charged with studying the statehood issue and the first Congressional hearing on statehood was held in Hawaii; in 1941, pursuant to recommendations by the 1937 Joint Congressional Committee, a territorial plebiscite was conducted. Also in 1941, a bill creating a statehood commission was introduced in the regular session of the Legislature, but was tabled on the recommendation that the powers of the Hawaii Equal Rights Commission be expanded to promote statehood. In the special session, the functions of the Equal Rights Commission were so amended.

Act 115 authorized the creation of a commission of eight known supporters of statehood, four to be appointed to serve at-large and one to be a resident of and appointed from each of the counties. (Act 160, S.L.H. 1951 expanded the membership to nine to prevent a tie in voting. Five were members at-large and not more than five were to be members of the same political party.) While the primary function of the Statehood Commission was the advancement of statehood, it was also responsible for representing Hawaii in federal legislation, protecting against discriminatory legislation, preventing discrimination against American citizens of the Territory, correcting false information, and promoting the general interest and welfare of the Territory of Hawaii. It was authorized to assemble, compile, and disseminate information; conduct national or sectional advertising and publicity campaigns; appear as the representative of the Territory before Congress or any federal department in regard to statehood; and cooperate with any citizens' organization formed to accomplish the objects of the Act.

Act 115 also authorized the creation of a legislative holdover committee, to be composed of six members of the Senate and six members of the House of Representatives. The holdover committee was to cooperate and advise the Statehood Commission on the pending statehood bill in Congress. Its members met with the Commission, either in body or was represented by its chairman or vice-chairman.

On May 29, 1947, Governor Stainback appointed Delbert E. Metzger, Raymond S. Coll, Abner T. Longley, Samuel Wilder King, Gavien Bush, F.W. Broadbent, David T. Trask and Charles A. Rice to the Statehood Commission. At its initial meeting on June 9th, Abner T. Longley was elected chairman. (Succeeding chairmen were S.W. King, C. Nils Tavares, and Lorrin P. Thurston.) Pursuant to Section 5 of Act 115, on July 1st all property, records, and personnel of the Hawaii Equal Rights Commission were transferred to the Statehood Commission.

Routine functions of the Commission were coordinating and assisting the witnesses who appeared at various Congressional hearings and publishing pamphlets and publicity material, including the Hawaii Statehood News. It sponsored periodic speaking tours through several states.

Upon recommendations by the Delegate to Congress and the Executive Secretary, in August 1947, the State Constitution Committee was appointed to lay the groundwork for the convening of a constitutional convention. During the Constitutional Convention in 1950, the staff of the Commission provided assistance to the convention delegates, and as authorized by Act 4 (Special Session, 1950), the Executive Secretary of the Commission worked with the Committee on Submission and Information to seek ratification of the proposed state constitution.

With the clause relating to national advertising declared invalid (Campbell vs. Stainback, et. al., 38 Hawaii, 310) and repealed by Act 365 (S.L.H. 1949), the Commission undertook letter-writing campaigns. These were spearheaded by the Citizens' Statehood Committee, chaired by Gregg Sinclair.

The records of the Hawaii Statehood Commission are divided into two sub-series, the records maintained in the Washington office and those in the Honolulu office. The records of the Washington office include the correspondence and general reference files kept by George McLane, Executive Secretary (1947-1950), and newspaper clippings and general and congressional information kept by Jan Jabulka, Executive Secretary (December 1951-1959). The files in the Honolulu office, maintained by the Administrative Secretary, include minutes of commission meetings, chairman's correspondence (U.S. Congress, local, and miscellaneous), correspondence between the Honolulu and Washington offices, exhibits on the state boundary issue, records pertaining to the Hawaii State Constitutional Convention, and the file of Oren E. Long, vice-chairman in charge of letter-writing.
