RECORDS OF THE JUDICIARY BRANCH
1839-1970

INTRODUCTION

The records of the Judiciary Branch date from 1839 to 1970. The records were created by the Supreme Court, the circuit courts, and district courts and were transferred to the Archives in several accessions between 1907 and 1998. The records total 561.88 cubic/linear feet.

The bulk of the records are case files and minute books in the form of writs, petitions, orders, decrees, and judgments which document the many ways in which the Judiciary exercised the judicial power of government to interpret and apply the law. In addition, there are administrative records, including jury lists, court calendars, applications to practice law, appointments of district magistrates and circuit court judges, commissions and oaths of judicial officers, and court activity reports which document the routine functioning of the Judiciary.

Access to the bulk of the case files, minute books, and records is unrestricted. Access is restricted to adoption, guardianship, juvenile, and institutional commitment records that are less than 80 years old. Access to adoption records is restricted by HRS 578-15. Access to guardianship records and other juvenile court proceedings is restricted by HRS 571-84. Access to commitment records is restricted by HRS 334-5. Access to records less than 80 years old is subject to screening by an archivist to prevent disclosure of information restricted under one of the several provisions of HRS 92F.

AGENCY HISTORY

On October 8, 1840, Kamehameha III granted the first constitution of the Hawaiian Kingdom, which vested the judicial power of government in a Supreme Court, consisting of the King as chief judge, Premier (kuhina nui), and four individuals appointed by the representative body. Island courts held by their respective governors functioned as circuit courts on their respective island. The island governors were given powers to appoint judges who functioned as district magistrates for the island. Chapter XLVII of the Laws of 1842 mandated that the Supreme judges assemble in Honolulu each June and in Lahaina each December to try cases appealed to them. Selection criteria for foreign and native juries were provided for in the Laws of 1842.

The Third Act of Kamehameha III in 1847 titled "An Act to organize the Judiciary Department of the Hawaiian Islands" created four levels of courts - the Supreme Court, the Superior Court of Law and Equity, four circuit court jurisdictions, and district courts.

The Superior Court held original jurisdiction over legal actions affecting government officials, foreign ambassadors and resident consuls and held appellate jurisdiction on all civil and criminal matters. Decisions of the Superior Court were subject to appeal to the Supreme Court. The Supreme Court established by the Constitution of 1840 was abolished in December 1852 and reestablished by an 1853 act which mandated the transfer of the civil and criminal jurisdiction from the Superior Court to the Supreme Court.

An 1853 act relating to the Judiciary Department empowered the Chief Justice to grant divorces, to hear and determine probate, bankruptcy, admiralty, equity matters, and to decree the foreclosure of mortgages. With this act, the legal, civil, and criminal jurisdiction of the Superior Court of Law and Equity was transferred to the Supreme Court. This allowed the Supreme Court to have original jurisdiction in almost all legal matters on the island of Oahu. By 1864, the First Circuit Court on Oahu was gradually phased out of existence and its judicial powers were transferred to the Supreme Court. Appellate jurisdictions in chambers remained as a circuit court function and such proceedings were referred to as Intermediary Court. Appeals from the District Court of the First Circuit were heard in Intermediary Court. In 1874, the intermediary function of the First Circuit Court judge was transferred to the Supreme Court which now held both original and appellate jurisdiction for the island of Oahu. In 1892, the functions of the Supreme Court were restricted to those of an appellate court. Its functions as a circuit court were assumed by a reestablished First Circuit Court.

The circuit courts had jurisdiction over adoptions, district and police court appeals, arbitrations, bankruptcies, admiralty, civil, criminal, divorce, fishing rights, guardianship, naturalization, probate, special proceedings, and water rights cases. Civil cases include equity and law cases. Article 18 of the Constitution of the Republic of Hawaii (1894) vested the authority to naturalize aliens in the Supreme Court. The circuit courts' jurisdiction remained the same when Hawaii became a territory of the United States in 1900 with the exception of admiralty cases and naturalizations of aliens. Admiralty cases were not heard by the circuit courts after 1900; jurisdiction over maritime cases resides in federal district court. In 1900 jurisdiction over naturalizations of aliens was transferred from the Supreme Court to the individual circuit courts.

The Kingdom was divided into four judicial districts or circuits. The First Circuit was the island of Oahu, with Honolulu as the seat of justice. The Second Circuit consisted of Maui, Molokai, Lanai and Kahoolawe, with Lahaina as the seat of justice. The island of Hawaii comprised the Third Circuit, with Hilo as the seat of justice. The Fourth Circuit consisted of Niihau and Kauai with Hanalei designated as the seat of justice. In 1853 Nawiliwili was designated the Fourth Circuit seat of justice. In 1892, the Judiciary reorganized. The islands of Kauai and Niihau were designated the Fifth Circuit. The jurisdiction of the Fourth Circuit encompassed the districts of Hamakua, Hilo and Puna on the island of Hawaii. In 1943 the Fourth Circuit was abolished and the entire island of Hawaii was again designated the Third Circuit.

The 1847 Act organizing the Judiciary Department designated the district and police courts as the island courts not of record. District and police court determinations were subject to appeal in the circuit courts on their respective island. District and police justices had jurisdiction to determine all civil and criminal cases. Police justices were assigned to the ports of Honolulu and Lahaina and had jurisdiction over both minor civil and criminal as well as maritime cases. Police justices also had jurisdiction over foreigners over the entire island or circuit in which his district was situated. The 1892 Judiciary reorganization designated all police justices as district magistrates, and held powers formerly exercised by police justices. The district courts' jurisdiction remained the same when Hawaii became a territory of the United States in 1900. The exception was maritime cases which were not heard in the district courts after 1900. Traffic violations, previously handled by the county police departments, were criminalized and heard in the district courts after 1960.

The clerks of the Supreme Court, circuit courts, and district courts were appointed by their respective courts and had the power to issue process in all suits and matters brought before the court, administer oaths, take depositions of witnesses, to assess damages, and draw juries. The clerk recorded the proceedings of the court and held custody of court records. He had charge of the seals of the court, maintained financial records, made quarterly account reports, and maintained an alphabetical list of plaintiffs and defendants to any suit or judgment recorded.

SCOPE AND CONTENT NOTE

The records document the function of the Judiciary branch of the Hawaiian government from the early years of the sovereign constitutional monarchy to well into statehood. One of the earliest items in the record group is a minute book of the Supreme Court dated 1844 in the Civil and Criminal Minute Books of the First Circuit Court (Series 198, vol. 1) which reflects the initial organization Supreme Court as authorized by the Constitution of 1840. A Fifth Circuit Court adoption minute book in the Civil and Criminal Minute Books of the Fifth Circuit Court (Series 251, vol. 27) contains the most recently dated item (1970) in the collection.

The bulk of the records document the primary function of the courts, to dispense justice to parties, in civil cases where plaintiffs seek compensation from defendants, and in criminal cases where individuals who commit offenses against the state are tried, and if found guilty, are punished. Circuit court and district court cases are both represented in the records.

The administrative function of the Judiciary branch and of individual circuit and district courts is documented in Records of the Chief Justice and First Circuit Court Judges (Series 240), Records of the Clerks of the Supreme Court and the First Circuit Court (Series 241), Incoming Letters to the Second Circuit Court (Series 028), Records of the Second Circuit Court Clerk (Series 243), Records of the Third Circuit Court Clerk (Series 245), Miscellaneous Case Files of the Fourth Circuit Court (Series 246), Records of the Fourth Circuit Court Clerk (Series 248), Miscellaneous Case Files of the Fifth Circuit Court (Series 249), Records of the Fifth Circuit Court Clerk (Series 252), and Records of the Honolulu District Court Clerk (Series 254).

Administrative records include court calendars, notary books, jury lists, district court reports, 19th Century and district court oaths of magistrates and attorneys, 19th Century applications of attorneys to practice law, clerk's minutes, and late 19th Century and early territorial notary public record books and correspondence. The subject files of the Chief Justice date from 1959 to 1967 and document his function as the administrative head of the Judiciary. Appointments of district magistrates, district court reports to the Supreme Court, revisions of the rules of the Supreme Court, circuit, and family courts are included in the records. There are holograph record books of individual Supreme Court justices from the Kingdom in the Civil and Criminal Minute Books of the Supreme Court and First Circuit Court (Series 198) which document both judicial and administrative functions.

This record group is organized into subgroups by jurisdiction, as follows: Supreme Court; First Circuit Court (Oahu); Second Circuit Court (Maui, Molokai, Lanai and Kahoolawe); Third Circuit Court (Hawaii island); Fourth Circuit Court (Hamakua, Hilo, and Puna on Hawaii island); Fifth Circuit Court (Kauai); District Court of the First Circuit (Oahu); District Court of the Second Circuit (Maui County); District Court of the Third Circuit (Hawaii island); and District Court of the Fifth Circuit (Kauai).

The records of all the circuit courts contain case files and minute books relating to civil, criminal, divorce, and probate court proceedings. Adoptions and guardianship proceedings are included with probate case files and minute books. Records less than 80 years old are subject to screening by archivist and access may be restricted by privacy laws relating to adoption and guardianship proceedings. (HRS 578-15 and HRS 571-84). Gaps in case files are noted in the series descriptions and container lists. A summary of dates covered in the records and case files unique to individual circuit courts follows.

The Supreme Court and First Circuit Court records date from 1844 to 1967. There are gaps in coverage from 1917 to 1958. Admiralty and Intermediary case files and minute books are found in the Supreme Court and First Circuit Court. The Second Circuit Court records date from 1848 to 1917. The records of the Third Circuit Court date from 1850 to 1943. Bankruptcy and tax appeals proceedings are documented in civil minute books in Civil and Criminal Minute Books of the Third Circuit Court (Series 244). The records of the Fourth Circuit Court date from 1893 to 1943. Miscellaneous Case Files (Series 246) and Fishing Rights Case Files (Series 023) provide a small collection of records relating to water and fishing rights in the districts of Hamakua, Hilo, and Puna on the island of Hawaii. The records of the Fifth Circuit Court date from 1848 to 1970. Miscellaneous Cases (Series 249) and Special Proceedings (Series 250) contain a small group of records relating to water rights, fishing rights, land ownership, and plantation labor contract enforced under the Masters and Servants Act (1859 Civil Code). These case files are not fully indexed by name or subject. Naturalization proceedings are documented in Civil and Criminal Minute Books of the Third Circuit Court (Series 244), Minute Books of the Fourth Circuit Court (Series 247), and Civil and Criminal Minute Books of the Fifth Circuit Court (Series 251).

The records of the district courts are primarily minute books of civil and criminal proceedings dating from 1847 to 1954. The bulk of the minute books cover 1860 to 1920. District court proceedings for minor civil, institutional commitments, criminal arraignments, and non jury criminal cases are documented. There are proceedings relating to plantation labor contract enforcement throughout the circuits. Indentured plantation laborers included Hawaiians and immigrants from North America, Europe, and Asia. The minute books are not indexed by name or type of case. The bulk of the minute books are in Hawaiian and have not been translated. Records less than 80 years old are subject to screening by archivist and access may be restricted by privacy laws relating to commitment proceedings (HRS 334-5). The later territorial period from 1930 to 1959 is not well covered in the records.

The following Judiciary records are indexed: civil, criminal (except Third and Fourth Circuits), divorce, equity, law, and probate case files, and wills for all circuits. Also indexed are the Third, Fourth, and Fifth Circuit Court probate minute books. These indexes are cataloged. Manuscript indexes to other case files are noted in the series descriptions. Manuscript indexes to individual minute books are generally located at the beginning or end of each volume.

The volume of records created and the standardization of their form both increased over time. The earliest records are unformatted holograph court documents such as petitions, depositions and judgments. By 1880, printed forms in English and in Hawaiian for complaints, mittimus, summons, writs, etc., were in wide use by the courts.

Processing in detail was considered unnecessary because many of these records were processed and indexed at various times since the early 1900's. Necessary preservation actions were taken. Because of badly deteriorated bindings, volumes were tied with twill tape; other volumes were placed in archival boxes. Threads and tags used to identify the record books were removed from the spines of bound volumes. Some limited consolidation, weeding of extraneous material, duplicate records, removal of fasteners and flattening of folded documents was accomplished concurrently with refolding and boxing of the paper records. Many of the leather bound volumes were damaged by chemical fumigation. Some insect damage, principally boreholes, exists, as does some water damage; however, these conditions required no preservation actions at this time.

Subject files of the Chief Justice (Series 240) were weeded of routine administrative documents such as requests for sick and vacation leaves, routine correspondence between the Chief Justice and other branches of government, correspondence from inmates, invitations, travel requests and approvals, personnel documents such as job descriptions and position classifications, budget requests, furniture inventories, and conference materials.

Other weeded material include warrant record books, court costs account books, blank receipt books, draft court calendars, and court clerk draft minutes to proceedings. A draft naturalization index volume which contained names of individuals naturalized between 1894 to 1904 was weeded. The record copy of this index and its related case files are in the custody of the First Circuit Court.

Microfilm of Judiciary records, with the exception of the Second Circuit Court probate case files and minute books, were selectively filmed by the Church of the Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints (Mormon Church) ca. 1970. Records were selected for microfilming based on the genealogical information content of each document. The Judiciary records microfilmed by the Mormon Church include Divorce Case Files of the First Circuit Court - MFL 51, Probate Case Files of the First Circuit Court - MFL 52, Wills - MFL 53, Divorce Case Files of the Second Circuit Court - MFL 54, Divorce Case Files of the Third Circuit Court - MFL 56, Probate Case Files of the Third Circuit Court - MFL 57, Divorce Case Files of the Fourth Circuit Court - MFL 58, Probate Case Files of the Fourth Circuit Court - MFL 59, Divorce Case Files of the Fifth Circuit Court - MFL 60, and Probate Case Files of the Fifth Circuit Court - MFL 61. Because individual documents within case files were selected for genealogical information, the above listed microfilms may not provide complete documentation relating to each case file.

SUPREME COURT AND FIRST CIRCUIT COURT SERIES DESCRIPTIONS

- 001 ADMIRALTY RECORDS OF THE FIRST CIRCUIT COURT. 1848-1900.
88 linear inches in 16 5-inch boxes, and 4 oversize volumes.
Arranged in the following order: case files, index, and minute books. Case files are arranged numerically. Contains cases 1 through 225. Case numbers 146 through 174 were not used by the court. The index to case files is arranged alphabetically by names of plaintiffs and defendants and provides the case file number. The minute books are arranged chronologically. Minute book indexes by name of plaintiff and libellee are located at the beginning of each volume.

Case files generally contain libel complaints, warrants, bonds, petitions, monitions (summons), bill of costs, motions, subpoenas, notices of motion for hearing, statements of claim, claims, accounts, affidavits, appeals, testimony, proceedings, judgments, satisfactions of judgment, decisions of the court, briefs, agreements between parties, depositions, exhibits which may include report of survey on a vessel, cargo lists, passenger lists, crew member rosters, maps, and drawings depicting locations of vessels in port. Appeals from the district or police court contain the lower court records relating to the case.

Cases involve violations of port regulations, claims against vessels for damages and lost cargo in collisions, claims by businesses and shipping agents against vessels to recoup cargo losses, claims for wages by the crew of a vessel, claims for lost personal property, smuggling, and libel for salvage.

Cases were heard by a First Circuit Court judge or Supreme Court justice in chambers. The minute books document the admiralty proceedings heard in chambers and contain holograph copies of claims, complaints, affidavits, orders, judgments, decrees, petitions, lists of property, and court costs. Disputes between merchants and shipping agents against vessel owners, disputes between the ship's crew and vessel owners, and disputes between vessel owners are commonly found throughout the records.

Admiralty cases were not heard in the circuit court after 1900, when the Hawaiian islands became a territory of the United States. Jurisdiction over maritime cases resides in federal district courts.

- 002 CRIMINAL CASE FILES OF THE FIRST CIRCUIT COURT. 1848-1892.
290 linear inches in 58 5-inch boxes.
Arranged numerically. Contains cases 1 through 1700. Files for cases 17, 91, 142, 191, 285, 299, 338, 383, 416, 420, 553-584, 588, 612, 622, 633, 1056 through 1074, 1146, and 1648 were not transferred to the Archives.

A crime or public offense is an act committed or omitted in violation of a law forbidding or commanding it. Criminal proceedings were taken in the courts against persons charged with some violation of the criminal law. Criminal offenses include the following: murder, manslaughter, treason, duelling, assault and battery, kidnapping, unlawful imprisonment, child stealing, rape, abortion, polygamy, adultery, fornication, incest, sodomy, burglary, embezzlement, extortion, receiving stolen goods, arson, forgery, counterfeiting of coins, libel, obstructing justice, drunkenness, affray, violating Sabbath, vagrancy, riot, unlawful assembly, gaming, sale of intoxicating drinks, prostitution, and cruelty to animals.

Case files generally contain arrest warrants, criminal complaints, specifications of the charges against the defendant, writs, indictments, subpoenas, depositions, coroner reports, physician reports, bills of costs, arraignment documents, jury selection proceedings, defendant's pleadings, clerk's minutes, trial proceedings, instructions for the defendant, instructions to the jury, judgments, and mittimus. Appeals from the district or police court contain the lower court records relating to the case. Case files contain information about the crimes committed, defendant's pleadings, verdict of the jury, and sentencing by the judge. May contain personal information about the defendant such as age, marital status, occupation, and place of residence. Minutes to cases are in the Civil and Criminal Minute Books of the First Circuit Court (Series 198).

Documents are in Hawaiian and English. Some Hawaiian documents have been translated to English by the courts and Archives translators.

003 DIVORCE CASE FILES OF THE FIRST CIRCUIT COURT. 1848-1892.
247 linear inches in 11 cubic foot and 23 5-inch boxes.

Arranged numerically. Contains cases 1 through 2415. Case file 2147 was not transferred to the Archives.

In order to dissolve the marriage contract and obtain a divorce decree, a plaintiff filed for divorce in the First Circuit Court or the Supreme Court. Case files generally contain an application for divorce, summons, affidavit of publication of the divorce notice, divorce decree, statements by the husband or wife, and divorce proceedings. Information found in the records includes date of marriage, residence, circumstances and reasons which led to filing for divorce, custody of children involved, and fees paid to the court. Minutes to cases are in the Civil and Criminal Minute Books of the First Circuit Court (Series 198).

Documents are in Hawaiian and English. Some Hawaiian documents have been translated to English by the courts and Archives translators.

All divorce case files have been microfilmed and cataloged as MFL 51.

004 EQUITY CASE FILES OF THE FIRST CIRCUIT COURT. 1847-1899. 410 linear inches in 82 5-inch boxes.

Arranged numerically. Contains cases 1 through 396 and 500 through 1114. Files for cases 397 through 499 were not transferred to the Archives.

In order to seek abatement of public or private nuisance, to recover damages, to settle disputes which may include property claims, a plaintiff petitioned the First Circuit Court and after 1852, the Supreme Court to make and award a judgment, decree, order or injunction.

Case files generally contain petitions, summons, affidavits, subpoenas, pleas, proceedings, orders, masters reports, decrees, motions, bills, receipts, judgments, decisions, and appeals. If a case involved property claims, the file may contain information on land titles and family history of plaintiffs and defendants. Appeals from the district or police court contain the lower court records relating to the case. Minutes to cases are in the Civil and Criminal Minute Books of the First Circuit Court (Series 198).

Documents are in Hawaiian and English. Some Hawaiian documents have been translated to English by the courts and Archives translators.

005 INTERMEDIARY RECORDS OF THE FIRST CIRCUIT. 1874-1892. 103 linear inches in 8 cubic foot and 1 5-inch boxes, and 1 oversize volume.

Arranged in the following order: case files and one minute book. Case files arranged numerically. Contains cases 1 through 889. RECORDS OF THE JUDICIARY

Series No. : 469

Series Title: First Circuit Court Minute Books

Date Range: 1900-1963

Quantity: 115.83 linear feet. 421 oversize volumes.

Creator: First Circuit Court

Physical Characteristics: Handwritten and typescript leaves in bound, acco-fastened and three-ring books in fair to good condition. Many of the older volumes have insect damage. Several have water damage and a few have separated covers or deteriorated binding. A few have tipped-in pages.

Content Description: Minute books were kept by the clerks of the several divisions of First Circuit Court and contain summaries of court proceedings. Entries contain court date; court orders; names of attorneys, defendants, plaintiffs, and other parties involved; judgments; and sentences in criminal cases. The records include minutes of cases heard both in open court and in the judge's chambers. Open court matters include accident (workers compensation), annulment, civil, criminal, divorce, equity, law, probate and small estate cases as well as grand jury reports. Closed proceedings (matters heard in chambers) include adoption, probate (guardianship), paternity (bastardy) and special proceedings cases (which involve such things as habeas corpus applications, mandamus, petitions to initiate judicial actions, and water rights cases). Some of the cases are appeals from District Court or Land Court.

The volumes also contain administrative matters such as applications for licenses to practice law, appointments of judges to the bench, appointments of court clerks, trial jury drawings, orders for official mourning for deceased government officials, and for continuation and adjournment of court terms.

Adoption, guardianship, and paternity cases may provide names of biological parents, adoptive parents, and guardians, as well as background information. Annulment, desertion and marital separation cases were sometimes filed as divorce or equity cases. In the early 1950's, most law cases were redesignated as civil cases. Divorce cases sometimes include indication of the ethnicity of the parties.

Civil, equity, and law minutes note court actions to adjudicate property claims and provide legal remedies in disputes. Issues include actions for injunctions, adverse possession, partition of land parcels, breach of contract, damages, contested deeds and wills, disputes over land titles, ejectments and evictions from property, quiet title actions, tax appeals, and water rights. For example, the law cases include breach of contract civil lawsuits resulting from the inability of businesses to collect from insurance companies for damages incurred during the Chinatown fires of 1900-1901; the equity cases include matters regarding large estates and trusts such as Bishop, Campbell, Queen Emma, Lunalilo, McInerny and others. Probate and Small Estate cases contain proceedings dealing with distribution of property and wealth of the deceased.

Criminal proceedings contain charges filed by the government against the defendant, defendant's pleading, minutes of the trial, verdict, and sentence. Criminal cases of gambling, work stoppages, riots and bigamy among Chinese immigrants are a source of local history and social customs in the Territory of Hawaii. Volume 27 contains minutes of a 1909 trial of agricultural workers involved in a Waipahu labor riot (Criminal case 4611). Minutes of the 1932 trial (Criminal case 11891/"the Massie Case") of Grace Fortescue, Thomas H. Massie, Edward J. Lord, and Albert O. Jones are in volume 116.

Arrangement: The volumes are arranged chronologically by annual court term and thereunder by numbered court division. There is some overlap in earlier volumes because they were often kept for more than a year, and sometimes for shorter periods. Minutes in earlier volumes are in chronological order by hearing date. In later volumes, other arrangements exist. When it is not chronological, the Container List provides arrangement information. "Arranged alphabetically," indicates that arrangement is alphabetical by name of: the defendant in criminal and bastardy (paternity) cases; the libelant in divorce cases; the plaintiff in law cases; the applicant or petitioner in adoption, accident (workmen's compensation), annulment, equity, separate maintenance/marital separation and special proceedings cases; the deceased in probate and small estate cases; and the incompetent, insane, minor, non compos mentis or spendthrift in guardianship cases. Exceptions to the above, including errors when the volumes were assembled and bound, are provided in detail on the Container List.

Access: Access to some volumes containing minutes of adoption, guardianship, and paternity cases is restricted by law.

1. Adoption records shall not be inspected by any person, including the parties to the proceedings, except by order of the family court. HRS 578-15(b)(1).
2. Court records in paternity proceedings, formerly referred to as bastardy, shall be withheld from public inspection. HRS 571-84.
3. Court records in guardianship proceedings shall be withheld from public inspection. HRS 571-11(3); HRS 571-84.
4. Restrictions on access to records in the State Archives whether, confidential, classified, or private, shall be lifted and removed 80 years after creation of the record. HRS 94-7.

Notes

1. For preservation purposes, oversize volumes may not be photocopied.
2. Availability of indexes to individual minute books is noted in the container list.

RECORDS OF THE JUDICIARY

Series Title: Applications to Practice Law

Series No. : 513

Date Range: no date, 1870; 1876, 1878-1890, 1895-1898.

Quantity: 0.5 cubic foot.

Creator: Supreme Court

Physical Characteristics: Holograph and typewritten paper records in fair condition.

Content Description:

The Chief Justice of the Supreme Court was authorized by the 1859 Civil Code to admit attorneys to practice law in the District and Circuit Courts of the Hawaiian Kingdom. Attorneys were required to be Hawaiian subjects of good moral character and to submit an application to the Chief Justice soliciting permission to practice law along with supporting affidavits attesting to his good character, recommendations and letters of support. Upon acceptance of the applicant to practice law in the courts, the Chief Justice issued a license and required an oath of office.

Contains letters from applicants to the Chief Justice of the Hawaiian Supreme Court soliciting permission to practice law before the local circuit judge and the Police and District court justices on a particular island. In addition to the letters of application there may also be affidavits attesting to the good character of the applicant, recommendations from other attorneys and judges, and letters in support of the applicant from friends. Personal and professional information regarding the applicant may include age, education, names of associates and length of time spent in the practice of law. A license granted to the successful applicant is filed with the letters of application and supporting references. Applications of unsuccessful candidates are also included.

Oaths were administered by the Aha Hookolokolo Kiekie, or the Supreme Court and documented on certificates with the name of the licensed attorney, date of oath, jurisdiction of practice and signed by the attorney and Chief Justice.

The applications and oaths are from all circuits. Applications are dated 1870, 1876, 1878-1890, 1895-1898. Oaths are dated 1878-1881 and 1883.

Approximately 90% of the records are in Hawaiian. None have been translated.

Arranged in the following order: case files and minute books. Case files are arranged numerically. Contains cases 1 through 679. Minute books are arranged chronologically.

In order to divide the estate of a deceased person, probate proceedings were initiated and the division of property and wealth were adjudicated in the Circuit Courts. Case files generally contain petition for letters of administration; order of notice of petition for administration; affidavit of publication; clerk's minutes; order of administration; inventory of property; petition for allowance of accounts and discharge in deceased estates; executors, administrator's, guardian's or trustee's accounts; inventory of final settlement; order of notice of petition for allowance of final accounts and discharge in deceased estates; master's report; and order approving accounts and discharge. Case files usually provide date and place of death and inventories of personal possessions. Files frequently list the names of surviving family members such as the husband, wife, children, father, mother, brothers or sisters, and other relatives of the deceased.

Adoptions and guardianships were filed with probate cases starting in 1859 when judges were authorized to legalize adoptions.

Documents are in Hawaiian and English. Some Hawaiian documents have been translated to English by the courts and Archives translators.

Case files have been microfilmed and cataloged as MFL 57.

Minute books provide chronological documentation of the probate proceedings held in the judge's chambers. The minute books generally contain holographic copies of wills, petitions, inventories, orders and judgments.

Case files from 1881 to 1904 for the districts of Hamakua, Hilo and Puna on the island of Hawaii are filed in Probate Case Files of the Fourth Circuit Court (Series 020).
